

I am Primrose Everdeen, and my sister, Katniss Everdeen, has just survived the Hunger Games twice. She has now built a better society for me and everyone else; I can now move on and be a doctor. I have started with training with my mom, and since Katniss is known for I have an opportunity to be a doctor. I have always wanted to be one and I work great under pressure. Now I have decided to get more training, besides my mom, with other people.

My sister gave a call to a college and tomorrow is my interview. I decided to head on over to the library, so I am fully prepared. I get there and no one is there I check out five different books all about being a doctor; then I head home. If I didn't mention this the already the reason I want to be a doctor is because I get to save people's lives and I love the feeling. I get home and Katniss made dinner so eat and read at the same time.

It's silent in the room until I spill my food all over the book, and I quickly clean it up like it is no big deal. Just like I would do if I were a doctor, effortlessly. After I finish eating, I head upstairs and read, read, read. I read so long I fell asleep.

I wake up the next more ten minutes till the interview. I quickly get ready and head over. I am literally sprinting. I get there just on time and they call me in. The building is huge. They asked me why I would to be a doctor and what I want to learn, and the surprising thing is that I am not even nervous. The discussion goes by super quick and the next thing I know is I start training the next day at seven o' clock. I rush home and on the way I trip and fall. And smart as I am have a little first aid kit in my pocket to clean myself right up.

Finally, I get home and tell my mom and Katniss all about it. They are so proud of me and I thank Katniss; then we hug.

The next morning I head over to the building, and I am there just on time. When she enters the room to start her first day training, she finds that it's a strange old man her is teaching her everything. Suddenly she's feels very uncomfortable. He shows her many things, but Prim has found she cannot focus because the way the guy looks is so distracting. All of a sudden she realizes that he looks exactly like President Snow. She tries to keep it all in and tries to focus. She notices the time is moving very slowly. The guy then brings out the tools they need to practice with. She then asks for a name since she didn't hear it if he had said it before. He then answers, Sam. It's over. She walks home looking around seeing a bunch of people that look like the ones who have fallen.

When gets home she tells Katniss all about it, then goes to bed. For she is really tired. When she gets up the next morning to go to learn more there is a new person to teach her. It is a girl and Prim has asked where Sam had gone. The girl answers saying with tremble in her voice that he got- fired. They finish their lesson this time with Prim in total focus. And once again Prim heads home.

When she gets home she asks Katniss what had happened to Sam. Katniss replies saying she had reported him and they said they were going deal with him. Prim stops and walks away, knowing she was the reason for all of this.

Days go along the same. Prim goes to learn and comes back to tell them all about it. She is almost ready to work with a real patient. She is so excited!

The next day was her big day. She gets there and works on the patient who had touched poison ivy. It takes no longer than 30 minutes.

Afterward they tell her she is ready to be a doctor and once more she runs home to tell Katniss.
